

BEN WELCH TO SHOW QUICK CHANGE ACT

Comedian Will Demonstrate That He Impersonates Both Italian and Hebrew.

BEN WELCH, the comedian-monologist, is about to add another feature to the performance in which he appears at the Gayety Theater this week, that of lightning change artist. He has been doing this for some time, but has started out this season, but the trouble has been that he has done it so well no one believes it is really Welch who appears in the new character. And so he intends to give a demonstration sometime this week of just how the thing is done by changing his makeup and whole appearance in full view of the audience. Welch has been a vaudeville headliner for years. He appears at Kress's in this city only a few months ago. He wanted to take out a show of his own, however, which accounts for his being in burlesque, and he also wanted to give himself a wider field for his work. He appears in a Hebrew character in the first part of the show, and later returns to sing an Italian song. It is this Italian song that has caused the troublous. It is the Hebrew character that the audience takes to him, but within five seconds after he finishes it Welch is back on the stage in his Hebrew character, and complaints are heard that the audience does not like the Hebrew, not on the stage, more often than the people believing that Welch did the Italian because of the quick change back to his former character. To demonstrate that he can make a lightning change, Welch intends to give a Gayety audience a chance to see him do it. He has not decided when it will be, but will select some day this week.
